THIS WEEK'S CHART

● ANALYSED BY ALAN JONES

● Kylie Minogue writes another page in the book of chart history this week, debuting at number two with her latest single 'The Loco-Motion', which thus becomes the highest debuting single by a female solo singer in nearly 36 years of chart history. The previous best was the number three debut of Madonna's 'Who's That Girl', 13 months ago.

It could even have been better for 20-year-old Kylie. Trailing behind Glenn Medeiros on sales for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, she overtook him and was destined to enter the chart at number one until a super Saturday spurge took Yazz And The Plastic Population to the top.

With her previous singles 'I Should Be So Lucky' and 'Got To Be Certain' peaking at number one and number two, respectively, even if 'The Loco-Motion' fails to improve on its debut, Kylie can console herself with the fact that her first three singles have made a bigger impression than those of any other female solo star, and no act has had a better start to its chart career since Frankie Goes to Hollywood got off the mark in spectacular style with three straight number one singles in 1984.

"It really is unbelievable," bubbled Kylie when I spoke to her earlier this week.

"I never imagined my singing career would take off in such a big way."

It's appropriate that 'The Loco-Motion' should prove such a big hit for Kylie, since it was the song which brought about her recording contract.

Along with several other members of the cast of 'Neighbours', Kylie agreed to appear at a benefit concert in Melbourne last year for a local football team. Originally scheduled to perform just one song with Kylie as lead singer and the remainder of the 'Neighbours' deputation on backing vocals, they were having such a good time they decided to do another.

Says Kylie: "It had to be something we all knew, including the band. I had a Carole King songbook at home and was very familiar with the tunes in it, including 'The Loco-Motion', even though, at that point, I'd never heard Little Eva's original (1962) version of it. Like most Australians though, I did know the Grand Funk Railroad version that was a hit in 1974.

"Anyway, we sang it and got a great ovation, so a friend who works for Channel 10 — the Australian TV network responsible for 'Neighbours' — suggested I record it, and set up the contacts."

A contract with leading Australian label Mushroom Records followed and, released down under in May 1987 as her debut single, 'The Loco-Motion' soared to number one, and stayed there for seven weeks.

Pete Waterman, a shrewd observer of the scene worldwide, heard it and hated it, even though it was produced by a PWL employee, and when Kylie started working with him, he insisted that this version of 'The Loco-Motion' should never be released in Britain. As a compromise, he produced Kylie's new version of the song along with Mike Stock and Matt Aitken.

"I like both versions, but I think I prefer the new one. It's a lot closer to the Little Eva version," quoted Kylie.

"It's the only cover version on the album — Matt, Mike and Pete wrote the other songs — but I'd definitely like to do some more oldies.

"My favourite songs of all-time are Marvin Gaye's '(Sexual) Healing'

● KYLIE MINOGUE: let's hope with all the money she's earning she'll soon be able to afford a proper hat and Kool And The Gang's 'Celebration'. I'd like to have a go at 'Celebration', but Dragon (Aussie group) "have beaten me to it.

"I'd also like to write some of the lyrics for my next album."

Meanwhile, however, Kylie is more than happy that SAW's 'Je Ne Sais Pas Pour Quoi' will be her next single, as it's her favourite off the current album.

Her success as a singer, particularly here in Europe, is making great demands on Kylie's time, and keeping her away from the Melbourne home she shares with her parents and sister more than she would like. After four weeks away, she's a little homesick, and finding it hard to come to terms with the excesses of the British tabloid press who, she agrees, are in a league of their own when it comes to rumours, gossip and lies.

"I like London a lot, but you really have to be on your toes here with the press. They're always there, and there's not a genuine story for them they'll make one up. I read recently that I was supposed to be having an affair with Dave Titlow of Blu Mercedes, and I've never met Fortunately, at the age of 20, is as level-headed and well-adjusted as many women twice her age, takes it all in her stride.

"If I'd known before I started it was going to happen. I don't know I'd have gone through with it or but I try to keep it in perspective because I'm number one doesn't mean I'm the best singer in the world. I try to think of it as a job as long as I remember that there's pressure.

"Sometimes, though, I think it's nice to have an anonymous existence to five existence. If it ever gets too much for me I'll pack it in and work as a fashion designer or in graphic arts, for the moment though I'm having a great time."
