THIS WEEK'S CHARTS

ANALYSED BYALANJONES

• 'Ferry 'Cross The Mersey' finally relinquishes its grip on the top of the singles chart after three weeks in pole position, only to be replaced by another

Stock Aitken Waterman-

produced cover as Jason Donovan celebrates his 21st birthday by taking his version of the Brian Hyland classic Sealed With A Kiss' straight to the top. It's lason's third number one in six months, naving already achieved the feat with his duet with Kylie Minogue, 'Especially For You', and on his own recently with Too Many Broken Hearts'. His only failure to date was his debut single 'Nothing Can Divide Us' that only managed to make the owly partition of number five in Septer. ... last year.

Having taken 'Sealed With A Kiss' to the top, Donovan has succeeded where Brian Hyland failed. In fact Hyland failed in both his attempts, with the original release only making number three back in 1962, and his second effort in '75 faring less well, only managing to reach number seven.

It's been a doubly good birthday present for the Aussie pin-up as Donovan's debut album, 'Ten Good Reasons', reclaims its position at the top of he chart.

Donovan's success deprives Cliff Richard of a fairytale entry at number one with his 100th single 'The Best Of 'le'. Had it made the top, it would have been Cliff's 13th number one single in a career that spans over 30 years, and exactly 30 years after achieving his first number one with 'Living Doll' in 1959.

It's ir setting to note that should 'The Best Game' fail to climb any higher it will equal the number two position of his very rst hit, 'Move It' in September '58.

Though Cliff's been having hits since before most of today's popstars were born, in Jason Donovan's case Cliff had just won the Eurovision Song contest and had another number one with 'Congratulations' as the young Jason was about to enter the world back in '68.

● IAN HUNTER . . . at least we think it's him

• After naming their first album 'Once Bitten' and their second 'Twice Shy', it's not too surprising that American rock group Great White saw fit to release Mott The Hoople's 'Once Bitten, Twice Shy' as a single.

The original version of the song, written by Mott's leader Ian Hunter failed to chart in America, but Great White's remake climbs to number 48 this week.

Though Mott's highest charting single in America failed even to reach the top 30, lan Hunter's 'Ships' was a number nine hit when covered by Barry Manilow in 1979, earning him more in songwriting royalties than all the rest of his songs put together.

• Britain's Eurovision entry, 'Why Do I Always Get It Wrong' by Live Report, peaked at number 73 in the chart a couple of weeks ago, despite finishing second in the competition.

None of the last five British entries have reached the top 50.

In 1988 Scott Fitzgerald's reached

● JASON DONOVAN: "It's not that I'm trying to look cool, it's just me birthday celebrations have taken their toll on me eyes" number 52, whilst the 1987, 1986 and 1985 entries — 'Only The Light' by Rikki, 'Runner In The Night' by Ryder and 'Love Is' by Vikki Watson all failed to register in the top 75.

The last British Euro-entry to become a substantial hit was Belle & The Devotions' 'Love Games' which climbed as high as number 11 in 1984. They had the gall to release a follow-up single after finishing seventh in the competition and, naturally, it sank without trace. Entitled 'All The Way Up' it drew a pertinent three word review from rm's Stephen Grey — 'Don't Tempt Me'.

● Record sales continue to reach new peaks. According to figures issued by the BPI, 163.8 million albums were sold in the year ending 31 March 1989 — an increase of nine per cent. Singles sales declined by three per cent to 60.1 million.

Good old fashioned vinyl now accounts for only 29.76% of the album market, compared to 19.1% for CDs and 51.2% for cassettes. A year ago the figures were: Vinyl — 35.4%; CDs — 13.8% and cassettes 50.8%.
