CHART FOCUS

Bryan Adams accelerates away from the rest of the field at the top of the singles chart, selling more copies of (Everything I Do) I Do It For You than the number two and three discs combined. Guns N' Roses 'You Could Be Mine' holds number three but isn't selling like an heir apparent, so Adams is sure of a third week at number one, and may well stay there for a month or longer.

Third time lucky for Cathy Dennis, who debuts at number 28 with Just Another Dream. The record has been out twice before, originally peaking in the 76-100 twilight zone of the chart, first in the autumn of 1989 and again a year later.

Following up a major number one hit can be a problem, as Chesney Hawkes found out when I'm A Man Not A Boy levelled out at number 27. Cher's Love And Understanding looks set to beat that peak, but follow on from The Shoop Shoop Song — the year's bestseller thus far — it really should be higher than number 15. Incidentally, neither of the Cher singles mentioned above was released on 12-inch, the current single appearing only on seven-inch, cassette and two different CDs.

Meanwhile, one of the strongest climbers this week is Voice Of The Beehive's Monsters And Angels, which vaults from number 60 to number 38. At this rate it must be fancied to overtake the number 15 peak of the group's biggest hit to date, 1988's Don't Call Me Baby. The single biggest selling format of Monsters And Angels last week was the CD single which comes in what is described as a "honey bag", in which it is indeed surrounded by glutinous liquid. It could be honey, but I'm not about to risk my health finding out.

On the album chart, Cher's Love Hurts continues at the top, while the week's highest new entry, at number 3, is Into The Great Wide Open, easily the highest charting album of Tom Petty's 14-year, nine-album career.

After debuting at number four last week, Alice Cooper's Hey Stoopid slides to number 16. Chart researchers ERA, who compile the data which accompanies the chart, were erroneously informed that the album was produced by Bob Pfeifer last week. In fact, Pfeifer was the executive producer, while Peter Collins — a British veteran with credits for Rush, Nik Kershaw, Musical Youth, Queensryche and Alvin Stardust among others — was the producer, Collins' credit appears correctly this week.

The dramatic success of PolyGram's Jason Donovan video single marks another chapter in the evolution of video as a marketing tool.

In its first week of release, the four-minute promo of Any Dream Will Do shot to number one in the music video chart and number two in the sell-through chart.

Woolworths had suggested to PolyGram in the past that the one-off one-promo video release could be a huge success provided it was done quickly.

Polydor managing director Avid Munns decided two weeks ago that a rush-release video single was the perfect vehicle to promote the Jason Donovan single.

In just 48 hours, about 1,000 copies and accompanying display material were in the

Smith admits he was initially sceptical about the chances of the video single selling well well on the format it was going to be this one," says Smith.

The Any Dream Will Do video has sold primarily to the youth market which is perhaps not as fickle as some of the older age groups.

"I think the more serious music buyer, such as someone who might buy a Sting album, would not buy a £4.99 video single but would prefer to get the album or the longform video," says Smith.

He says PolyGram will probably only release such singles occasionally. But he adds that in future PolyGram will consider widening the number of outlets for the format, to include other retail chains.

"It's another new marketing tool for us and we will go forward with about two or three projects, all of which will
