CHART FOCUS

Something Got Me Started, the introductory single from Simply Red's latest album Stars, heads down the chart this week, after peaking at number 11. But the album debut spectacularly at number one, after selling around 150,000 copies last week. The enormous popularity of the Simply Red album — their second consecutive number one — prevents the new Prince album Diamonds And Pearls and Tina Turner's compilation Simply The Best from debuting at the top, even though both sold far more copies last week than would ordinarily be required for a number one. In the present climate, unless an album debuts at number one it probably won't get there at all. It's unlikely, therefore, that Diamonds And Pearls will climb any higher. Had it reached the top, Prince would have equalled the tally of four consecutive number ones only recently achieved by one American — Bob Dylan. It's interesting that Warner released the Simply Red and Prince albums in the same week, knowing that only one of them could be number one. Had they released one last week and the other this week, it's practically certain that both would have topped the chart, and Prince would have equalled Dylan's record.

Last week was rather a mixed one for R.E.M., whose Out Of Time album finally dipped out of the Top 10, whilst winning a double platinum award after selling more than 600,000 copies. This week, they're back in the upper echelon, courtesy of The Best Of R.E.M., a new compilation issued by their former label I.R.S. Including the highlights of their 1983-87 output, among them their current hit The One I Love, it debuts at number seven.

Few industry observers expected the Scorpions to overtake Bryan Adams at the top of the singles chart this week, and sure enough Adams' (Everything I Do) I Do It For You extends its record-breaking run at number one to 14 weeks. But whilst Adams' single is finally beginning to decline, the Scorpions' Wind Of Change is surprisingly sluggish, posting only a 20 per cent gain this week. It should move to the summit next week, but it's going to be a close one — and it would be foolish to rule out the chances of Monty Python's Always Look On The Bright Side Of Life, which vaults all the way from number 30 to number eight.

ANALYSIS

In 1962 EMI's Columbia label was so impressed with the extended playing time of Cliff Richard's new album that the company decided to call it 32 Minutes and 17 Seconds.

How times have changed. A quick look at the playing times of some recent hit albums provide proof positive that today's long players have more FM (value for money) than ever before.

Last week, eight albums out of the Top 10 had playing times longer than one hour. Number 10 Bryan Adams, Status and Guns N' Roses and T Rex clocked up 77 minutes.

The reasons for this may seem fairly obvious. Four of these eight albums were two-disc sets — Bryan Adams' Making Up The Neighbours, Primal Scream's Gemadefica and the two respectively) on the CD format.

GNR: double-play VFM

It is in the CD format where VFM goes overboard. All of the two-LP sets appear on one CD and come close to the 80-minute ceiling on playing time. This has advantages. It typically clocked in at around 40 minutes, and early Beatles and Beach Boys LPs, at 30-35 minutes average, seem rather poor value today.

As royalty payments are divided equally according to the number of tracks, this can mean more work for the same money for both publishers and artists.

"What's happened is that artists have to put more music on to an album," says Andy Ross, head of A&R at Food Records. "And so the temptation is to put the B-sides of singles on to albums. But it all costs money — their money."

There are exceptions. Teen idols such as Jason Donovan rarely make albums over an hour in length. Ditto country artists in the US. But a trend has clearly been set, and it's even extending to the playing
