CHART FOCUS

It started more quietly this year than last, but the singles chart turnover is back up to speed this week, with 24 of last week's Top 75 being discarded to make way for newcomers. At the same time, many new hits barely in their stride are taking big tumbles despite getting Top Of The Pops exposure on Thursday. Two notable records the second category are S.O.U.L.S.Y.S.T.E.M.'s It's Gonna Be A Lovely Day, which dips from number 17 to 25 and Del Amitri's When You Were Young, which debuted at number 20 last week, and now sinks to 41.

One record that shows no sign of dipping is Whitney Houston's I Will Always Love You, which saunters to its ninth consecutive chart championship. Now double platinum, it's still selling more copies per week than some number ones achieve at their peak. Its sales are down only marginally this week, and, in percentage terms, it actually increases the margin of its victory at the top of the chart against Snap's Exterminate, which is now beginning to falter.

2 Unlimited's No Limit is the highest debutant at number four. It's a brand new song from the Dutch duo, and continues string of hits they've scored with Get Ready For This (number two), Twilight Zone (two), Workaholic (four) and The Magic Friend (11).

Meanwhile, Lulu — who debuts at number 14 with Independence — stretches her span of Top 40 hits to the second lengthiest ever by a female soloist, her 28 year and eight month career being a mere month shorter than champ Eartha Kitt's.

Martine Girault's career to date consists of one single released three times, but Revival is up-and-running this week as never before, debuting at number 37. It was originally released last year, missing the Top 200 entirely first time, and peaking at 53 at the second attempt.

So Close is the title of Dina Carroll's impressive debut album, and it's an apt title, since it enters the chart at number two this week, and very nearly knocked Genesis off their throne. Classical musicians and music had a banner week, with the Brodsky Quartet's collaboration with Elvis Costello debuting at number 18, Barrington Pheloung's third album of classical pieces used in TV's Inspector Morse vaulting to number 20 following the screening of the last programme, and David Zinman's interpretation of Górecki's Symphony No 3 soaring to number 27, after exposure on Radio Four news last week. Alan Jones
