CHART FOCUS

After 11 weeks at number one, Whitney Houston's I Will Always Love You is finally replaced at the top by 2 Unlimited's No Limit. The Dutch duo, the first act from Holland to reach number one since Pussycat in 1976, have had two previous number two hits — the second of which was turned back from its quest for the summit exactly a year ago — but have never previously topped the chart.

The 2 Unlimited hit is also the first number one for PWL Continental, but the ninth in total for the PWL group of labels since Kylie Minogue's I Should Be So Lucky set the ball rolling five years ago.

In 1986, the Communards' energetic revamp of Don't Leave Me This Way was a number one hit; in 1988, Simply Red's revival of the ballad If You Don't Know Me By Now got to number two, and this week West End featuring Sybil drop a notch from their number three peak with The Love I Lost. The link? The songs were all written by Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff, and in their original versions, were the three biggest hits for Harold Melvin & The Blue Notes in the same chart order, peaking at numbers five, nine and 21 respectively. Anyone wanting a number four hit should know that Melvin's fourth biggest hit was Wake Up Everybody.

Joining the small band of artists who have registered a hit single with a new recording made after their sixtieth birthday, Rolf Harris hit single with a new recording made after their sixtieth birthday, Rolf Harris (62 years old) enters the chart this week at number nine, with his bizarre rendition of Led Zeppelin's venerated

Stairway To Heaven. Rolf hasn't had a hit since his chart-topping Two Little Boys dropped off the chart in 1970. The only artist to withstand a longer exile from the chart to return with a new (as opposed to re-released) recording is Eartha Kitt.

For the second time in as many weeks, an EMI act with number one pedigree loses the battle for album chart supremacy with an outsider.

Last week, Jesus Jones were easily beaten by the Little Angels. This week it's the turn of Paul McCartney. Macca's last regular album, 1989's Flowers In The Dirt, was his sixth post-Beatles number one. His follow-up, Off The Ground, debuts at number five, while the Cult have their first ever number one with the greatest hits/live package Pure Cult. Meanwhile, Snap's The Madman's Return, now in its third incarnation, debuts at number eight. First time out, it failed to chart at all. And when it was re-issued last August it peaked at number 20.
