● Another Euro hit conquers UK chart ● SWV storm in at number seven

CHART FOCUS

Following its eight weeks at number one in Germany, and more modest but wide ranging chart-topping exploits in the rest of Europe, Culture Beat's Mr. Vain clambers to the top of the UK singles chart this week.

It's the third UK number one of European origin already this year, following 2 Unlimited's No Limit and Ace Of Base's All That She Wants. With big UK hits by numerous other acts based on the continent - Haddaway, Dr. Alban, Snap, Roxette, Cappella and Usura are just some of those who've reached the Top 10 - Europe has rarely provided this country with such a consistent and regular stream of hits.

After 10 weeks in the Top 10, Chaka Demus & Pliers's Tease Me drops to number 16. With a peak position of number three, it's the first single to spend so long in the Top 10 without occupying one of the top two positions since the Bee Gees' How Deep Is Your Love in 1978.

That was the year the Gibb brothers wrote no fewer than 14 UK hits; 1993 is shaping up to be their best year as writers since. Kim Wilde's cover of If I Can't Have You has just been a hit, Lulu's recording of Let Me Wake Up In Your Arms and Moses' More Than A Woman are both out today, and their own single Paying The Price Of Love climbs to number 25.

SWV - Sisters With Voices - have the highest new entry on the singles chart this week with Right Here, which debuts at number seven. Previously a lukewarm album track, it has been transformed into a big hit by its skilful interweaving with elements of Michael Jackson's familiar Human Nature track. The result is SWV's biggest hit to date, following the number 17 I'm So Into You and Weak, which peaked at 33. In the US, where Right Here is also hot, SWV made chart history earlier this year when I'm So Into You and Weak were in the Top 10 at the same time.

Add to that the two versions of Gibb songs now lined up for different teen acts and you'll see why their teeth are dazzlingly visible again.

The aforementioned If I Can't Have You was originally written for Yvonne Elliman and was a track on the multi-platinum Saturday Night Fever soundtrack, which also included the Trammps hit Disco Inferno (not a Gibb brothers composition). This week, as Kim Wilde's recording of If I Can't Have You dips out of the chart, Tina Turner's remake of Disco Inferno debuts. It's Tina's 31st hit and, being her 10th since her 50th birthday (she's 54 in November), it equals Frank Sinatra's record for most hits after the age of 50.

Arsenal soccer star Ian Wright's single Do The Right Thing debuts at number 43 this week. It's also number one in the Breakers Chart - but, based on the performance of the records which have occupied that position since the chart was introduced, it has an 84% chance of missing the Top 40.

Of the 32 records which have previously topped the list, a mere five have gone on to the Top 40, with Shaggy going all the way to number one. Taking a wider view of the Breakers Chart, around 600 records have made the chart since it was introduced, but only 17 have reached even the Top 40. The failure rate here, therefore, is more than 97%. Even those which have succeeded in escaping from this "death row" have done so more because of creative marketing - belated CDs and picture discs and the like - than through any impetus the chart has created.

Alan Jones.
