CHART FOCUS

Meat Loaf continues to make the running at the top of both the singles and albums charts, showing admirable strength against formidable foes. In its fourth week at number one, sales of his single I'd Do Anything For Love (But I Won't Do That) drop for the first time but nearest rival Bryan Adams' Please Forgive Me is also past its best, and none of the other contenders seems able to mount a serious challenge at present.

Meat's album Bat Out Of Hell II - Back Into Hell was, theoretically at least, in for a testing time this week as a couple of artists whose last albums debuted at number one - INXS and Right Said Fred - released new product alongside the ever-threatening Kate Bush and Chris Rea. In the event, Meat was an easy victor, with Bush coming in second and INXS third. Rea struggled in eighth place - his worst start in six attempts - while Right Said Fred are staring disaster in the face with Sex And Travel's number 35 debut standing in stark contrast to the chart-topping start made by its predecessor Up.

No other artist has had such a poor start following up a number one album since exactly a year ago, when The Farm's Love See No Colour peaked at a miserable number 84. The Farm somehow managed to alienate more than 95 percent of the fans who bought Spartacus, the previous chart topping album they released on Kate Bush has always been something of a pioneer. Back in 1978 she was the first British woman to have a number one album with The Kick Inside. That it was self-penned, her debut and she was just 19 years old added to the magnitude of her achievement. In the 15 years that have elapsed since then Kate has, by her own admission, worked more and more slowly and her current album The Red Shoes, which debuts at number two this week, is her first in four years. It's only her eighth album, yet her consistency is such that all have reached the top six and the release of The Red Shoes puts her into a three-way tie as the most successful female albums artist alongside Diana Ross and Madonna.

her own Produce imprint, an achievement of some magnitude, if not a wholly enviable one, particularly for Epic, which issued the latter album.

Returning to the current chart, with Urban Cookie Collective's Feels Like Heaven debuting at number nine and The Orb's Little Fluffy Clouds in at number 10, three years after its first unsuccessful release, the number of singles making their Top 75 debut inside the Top 10 this year climbs to 60 - the same as the total in the whole of 1992, itself a record year. More on this phenomenon next week.

Meanwhile, debuting at number 11 is Soul Asylum's Runaway Train. First released four months ago, it initially spent eight weeks in the Top 75, selling around 40,000 copies without climbing any higher than number 37. It has since gone on to become a large hit all over Europe, particularly in Sweden, where it is currently number two, and refused to lie down and die here, prompting its successful re-promotion.

Two Americans who have been making records for some time finally make their UK chart debuts this week. Baywatch TV star David Hasselhoff has been a successful singing star on the continent since 1989 when Looking For Freedom was a huge hit, even reaching number one in Germany. And a young singer from Florida named Judy Cheeks had her one and only US Hot 100 hit with Mellow Lovin' in 1978. Both score their introductory UK hits this week, Hasselhoff via I Could Only Say Goodbye and Cheeks with her recent number one club hit So In Love (The Real Deal).
