CHART FOCUS

Five weeks at number one now for Meat Loaf's I'd Do Anything For Love (But I Won't Do That) single, its decline from its sales peak being very gentle indeed.

By the middle of this week, it will have clawed its way into the top five of the year, though it will need to show even more staying power if it is to challenge for the 1993 singles chart championship, which is currently in the hands of Ace Of Base's All That She Wants, but is more likely to end up with UB40's (I Can't Help) Falling In Love.

All That She Wants has sold about 500 copies more, but (I Can't Help) Falling In Love is closing the gap at the rate of about 150 sales per week. Both have sold over 150,000 copies more than I'd Do Anything For Love (But I Won't Do That).

The success of Meat Loaf's single continues to generate massive sales for his albums - Bat Out Of Hell passed the septuple platinum level last week (2,100,000 sales), while Virgin reported Bat Out Of Hell II - Back Into Hell at 850,000 units last Thursday, a total it is adding to at a prodigious rate. Even so, it has lost the number one slot for the fourth time this week, its latest conqueror being label-mate Phil Collins' Both Sides.

Phil's is the sixth Virgin album to top the chart this year; the previous highest tally of number one albums in a year by a label is four. It's Phil's ninth number one album; he's had four solo and five as a member of Genesis. None of his six solo albums has peaked lower than two, or spent less than a year in the chart.

Mixed fortunes this week for David Bowie. EMI's 37-track double retrospective of his career, The Singles Collection, enters the chart at number nine, but his Buddha Of Suburbia TV soundtrack album is sixteen notches short of the Top 75. It's been quite a year for Bowie. After an undistinguished period fronting Tin Machine, he returned to his solo career earlier this year with the album Black Tie, White Noise. It debuted at number one in the UK in April, but failed to do nearly so well overseas, one factor in the collapse of the Savage label to which he was then pacted.

Alan Jones

The highest new entry to the singles chart this week is Elton John & Kiki Dee's True Love. A remake of the old Bing Crosby/Grace Kelly hit, written by Cole Porter when he was 65 years old, it debuts at number eight.

It's one of the most belated follow-ups in chart history, coming more than 17 years after Elton & Kiki's previous teaming, Don't Go Breaking My Heart, was a number one record.

The second highest new entry is also a remake - Guns N' Roses recording of the obscure Dead Boys track Ain't It Fun debuting at number nine.

The success of these two records brings the number of singles to enter the Top 75 inside the Top 10 this year to 62. With several weeks to go, that's already an improvement - if that's the word for such a phenomenon - on the previous record of 60 established last year.

This escalation has been going on a number of years. In 1991, 43 records debuted inside the Top 10, compared to 24 in 1990.

Making a more modest debut at number 21 is Sting's fourth Top 40 hit of the year, Demolition Man. It's a song which the former Police man clearly has affection for. He wrote it more than a decade ago, and first recorded it in 1981 for the Police album Ghost In The Machine. He subsequently recorded it again in 1986 for his live solo album Bring On The Night. It has also been released in cover versions by both Manfred Mann and Grace Jones, but this is its first time in the singles chart.
