Oasis hit eight-year sales high

SALES

Oasis came within an ace of snatching the all-time record for biggest first-week album sales last week, as (What's The Story) Morning Glory? entered at number one.

Eight years ago, Michael Jackson's Bad sold 350,000 copies in its first week. On the basis of Millward Brown data, Morning Glory sold around 346,000 – though it is impossible to be absolutely precise, as the continuing conversion of HMV shops to EPOS and the recent addition of 210 Asda stores make such projections an imperfect science at the moment.

One thing's for sure, Morning Glory represents substantial growth since the first week sales of Oasis's debut. Definitely Maybe in August last year, which were, a not insubstantial, 85,000. Last week, Morning Glory outsold its nearest competitor – Janet Jackson's Design Of The Decade compilation – by a margin of nearly four to one. Of every seven albums sold throughout the week, one was the Oasis album.

As has been evident for some time, 1995 is turning into a bonanza year for the record industry and there has been a succession of massive albums. Since The Beautiful South topped the chart at the beginning of the year, there have been 20 different artists at number one, of which all but four debuted at the summit. On a more jingoistic note, fourteen of the chart-toppers are British acts and six foreign.

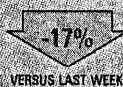

While singles sales were down last week, album sales appeared to be up 39% last week over the same week last year with no fewer than 2.4m albums sold, a lofty increase of 675,000 of which Oasis account for only a little over half.

Other new entries from KD Lang, Iron Maiden and Garbage played a significant role in the overall increase though one artist who surprisingly missed out was Gloria Estefan whose new album Abriendo Puertas debuts at number 84. Her last album, Thrill Me, Hold Me, Kiss Me, reached number five, an English language album compared to the current Spanish language effort.

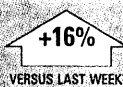

Language can't be the sole reason for the album's lack of success though, as such a barrier did not affect her previous Spanish effort Mi Tierra, which reached number 11 in the album chart. Besides, the average album buyer has proven him/herself more receptive to foreign language recordings than ever this year with Gaelic (Runrig), Spanish (Julio Iglesias), French (Celine Dion), Atrian (Deep Forest), North American Indian (Sacred Spirit) and even Norwegian (Sissel) language albums charting in 1995.

THE OFFICIAL CINCHARTS MONITOR

AIRPLAY

After six straight weeks at the top of the airplay chart, Simply Red's Fairground's popularity with programmers is undiminished. It registered 1,657 plays last week, a mere 18 fewer than the all time peak of 1,675 it attained in the previous seven-day period. It still has a handsome lead, in both plays and audience. In the latter category, The Rembrandts I'll Be There For You is runner up for the fifth week in a row, but in raw plays Mariah Carey's Fantasy is in second place.

As is frequently the case, Radio One's most-played track attracts only minimal support elsewhere. The BBC station still understands the newer and trendier bands more than its commercial cousins and gives top billing to Sleeper's What Do I Do Now?, which it spun 27 times last week. Some 90% of people who heard the record on the radio would have been tuned to Radio One at the time.

Both sides of Pulp's hit continue to attract additional airplay, though neither is rivaling the popularity enjoyed by Common People when it was a hit. Sorted For E's and Whizz is ranked at 32 on the airplay chart, eight places ahead of Mis-shapes.

After all the fuss about the former title's drug references, that seems surprising, but a closer look reveals the reality: Mis-shapes, in fact, was played 242 times last week compared to Sorted's 75 spins. The discrepancy is due mainly to Radio One, which is boldly supporting the controversial track which it played 16 times and compared to a dozen for Mis-shapes. In doing so, it exposed Sorted to twice as many people as Mis-shapes and thus caused the rankings – which are based on audience rather than plays – to appear topsy turvy. For the record, if Radio One's support for the two songs were to be combined, Pulp, and not Sleeper, would top the station's playlist.

Far and away the most popular track on radio by an act with an unproven track record is Gangsta's Paradise, the former US chart-topper by Coolio Featuring LV. The song, which comes from the movie Dangerous Minds, soars from 77 to 19 this week, with most of its support coming from Radio One.

For a record which takes as its title such a brief timespan, Yousou N'Dour and Neneh Cherry's 7 Seconds hit continues to show remarkable durability, 16 months after it blossomed into a sales hit. It attracts around 200 plays a week – over three per station – and is never far from the Top 50. This week, it is ranked 64th, with a healthy 197 plays.
