Coolio snatches singles crown

SALES

After achieving sales of more than 100,000 last week, Gangsta's Paradise by Coolio featuring LV debuts at number one on the singles chart. Based on the song Pastime Paradise, from Stevie Wonder's classic album Songs In The Key Of Life, Gangsta's Paradise spent three weeks at number one in the US last month.

In America, its success was not too remarkable; R&B is the dominant music of the day Stateside – of Billboard's Hot 100 last week, 61 were R&B cuts – with rap its second biggest component behind swing, but in Britain for such a record to reach number one is quite sensational.

Though numerous dance/rap hybrids have reached number one, this is the first gangsta rap record to reach the summit here. It did so with almost no support from the clubs (its BPM count is too low for dancefloor demands) and minimal plays from commercial radio, drawing almost all of its impetus from strong support by Radio One. Even Coolio's label Tommy Boy, for which this is the first UK number one, expected it to do no more than enter the chart in the Top 10.

Coolio's high-flying debut foils Meat Loaf's efforts to land an instant number one hit with I'd Lie For You (And That's The Truth), which debuts at number two after selling more than 90,000 copies, precisely two years after his only previous number one, I'd Do Anything For Love (But I Won't Do That). The most preposterous thing about I'd Lie For You is that, though a typical Meat Loaf hit, it's not written by Jim Steinman, the usual provider of his more OTT material, including the aforementioned I'd Do Anything For Love. It was actually written by the ubiquitous Diane Warren. Should it eventually reach number one, it will be Diane's third, following We Built This City for Starship in 1987 and Don't Turn Around for Aswad in 1988.

Another impressive debut, at number eight, is that of Everything But The Girl's Missing. When first released in August 1994, it spent a single week in the chart, peaking at 69. Subsequent remixes have turned it into a hit elsewhere, notably Italy, where it spent six weeks at number one, and the US.

After all the upheaval of recent weeks, the top three albums all retain their places this week. Simply Red's Life album remains way ahead of the field, selling some 133,000 copies to bring its two-week tally to 416,000 while runners up Oasis sell a further 83,000 copies of (What's The Story) Morning Glory? to bring its three-week total to 551,000.

AIRPLAY

The duopoly is finally broken. After six straight weeks with Simply Red's Fairground at number one and The Rembrandts' I'll Be There For You at number two on the Airplay chart, the East West pair are finally split this week, with Eternal's Power Of A Woman surging to number two, pushing The Rembrandts down to number three. Fairground, meanwhile, takes the airplay honours for the eighth week in a row. And, though its plays are down for the third week in a row, its audience is the highest yet, at nearly 77m. That's partly due to increased support from Atlantic 252, which, ironically, played both The Rembrandts and Simply Red hits 73 times apiece last week to make them its two most-played records just as they lose that joint distinction nationally.

The Lightning Seeds' melodic pop continues to captivate radio more than record buyers. Ian Broudie's whimsical style has brought them four Top 10 airplay hits this year (Change, Marvellous, Perfect and Lucky You) with singles that have failed to attain this status on the CIN chart. The latest, Lucky You, vaults from number 13 to number five this week, not least because it is one of three songs topping the Radio One list with 26 plays apiece.

Queen's Heaven For Everyone continues to make major gains and moves up to number seven this week after getting nearly 1,100 plays. It has extremely widespread support, but is still making its biggest impact in London, with 48 spins from Capital.

If pre-release airplay is anything to go by, Wonderwall will be Oasis's biggest hit to date. It climbs to number 16 this week, the group's highest placing on the Airplay chart by any single yet to be released. It naturally draws a lot of support from Radio One and Virgin, but, less expectedly, is already one of Atlantic 252's 10 most played tunes, earning 39 spins last week, the same number as Roll With It. If you think we are being unfair in remarking on Atlantic 252 being early on a record, as though it was unusual, please note that its two highest new entries this week are Celine Dion's Tu M'Aimes Encore at number 20 and Berri's Sunshine After The Rain at 22.

Tina Turner's title track from the upcoming Bond movie Goldeneye is proving hot. It wasn't delivered to radio until half way through last week, but still gained enough support to debut at number 24, with a one-track promo CD providing the bulk of early reports, though a vinyl single with David Morales remixes is going down well at dance stations.
