THE OFFICIAL UK CHARTS

CHART FOCUS

Exactly 12 years since Band Aid's Do They Know It's Christmas became Britain's first number one charity hit, Dunblane's Knockin' On Heaven's Door debuts at number one. It becomes the 15th number one charity hit in the past dozen years, and the first since Love Can Build A Bridge was a hit for Cher, Chrissie Hynde and Neneh Cherry in May last year. The Dunblane single sold 189,000 copies last week, almost three times more than any other single but far fewer than many previous charity number ones.

After debuting last week at number one, Boyzone's A Different Beat tumbles to number four, almost equalling the precipitous drop of Peter Andre's I Feel You, which slumped 1-5 the previous week, the biggest fall from pole position by any single since January 13 1991, when Iron Maiden's Bring Your Daughter...To The Slaughter free-fell 1-9. Four weeks later Queen's Innuendo became the first number one hit to spend as few as two weeks in the Top 10 - a record I Feel You equals this week as it continues to lose support at a phenomenal rate, spiralling 5-18.

Last week Manic Street Preachers became the first act to have four new Top 10 hits in 1996 when Australia debuted at number seven. Two more acts join them this week - Mark Morrison, in at five with Horny and Celine Dion, whose All By Myself enters at number six. Going one better, Shed Seven became the first act to have five new Top 40 hits in 1996 last month, a feat now equalled by Tina Turner, whose duet with Barry White is nevertheless a disappointingly low entry at number 31.

The Spice Girls go from strength to strength. While their single Say You'll Be There stages an unexpected recovery, moving 18-13, their debut album Spice takes a 25% week-on-week rise in sales. It sold 271,000 copies last week - its best yet - to take its six week tally to over a million, 1,061,000 to be precise. Robson & Jerome's Take Two continues to hold at number two, and has sold 888,000 copies in five weeks.

Lack of space prevented a mention last week of Mark Owen's low debut - at number 33 - with his debut solo album Green Man. It slumps further all this week, coming to rest at number 46. It has sold approximately 37,000 copies so far. Another great disappointment, although not to the artist, who went into print declaring that he would be happy not to sing again, must be the self-titled album of John Alford. Released hot on the heels of his three hit singles, all of which reached the top 25, it was expected to make a decent showing, but, released on November 25 its best chart placing to date is 171, while total sales are fewer than 5,000.

Simply Red's Greatest Hits falls 3-5 as its sales grow 35%; Sheryl Crow's self-titled album slips 11-13 despite a 33% hike and Alanis Morissette's Jagged Little Pill retreats 12-17 on a 7% week on week sales gain - all of which proves that we're right in the middle of another frenzied season of Christmas record buying. Album sales this week are up 18% over last week to 6,346,000 - but that's slightly down on the same week last year, when 6,362,000 albums were sold. This week is crucial. Last year saw a massive 10,304,000 albums sold in the comparable period, giving the industry its best week ever. To reach that figure sales must increase by 62% this week. Dunblane accounted for 11% of the singles market this week, lifting the singles market 11% above the same week last year. But even here further growth of 28% is needed to equal 1995's high tide point of 2,260,000.

Alan Jones

Completing 10 weeks of consecutive growth, Toni Braxton's Unbreak My Heart was played 1,818 times last week by stations monitored by Media Control, attracting an audience of over 65m, some 11% higher than any other record. Its place at the top of the chart over the Christmas period now seems assured, even though The Beautiful South's Don't Marry Her continues to make impressive progress. It has moved 22-12-3 in the last fortnight. Last week alone, it increased its plays from 530 to 1,002, finally getting support from Atlantic 252, where it was played 26 times.

Charity fatigue set in long ago at radio, so it's no surprise to find that while it debuts at number one on the sales chart, the Dunblane single Knockin' On Heaven's Door is getting fairly low level support from radio, its grand tally of 214 plays being equivalent to just three per station. It moves 106-46 on the airplay chart, though unless it makes massive strides in the next week or two it will peak at a lower airplay position than any of this year's other 23 CIN number ones. Capital is its most important supporter as, although it played the record just eight times last week, it delivered a sixth of its total audience.

Radio One is moving in a different direction again. 16 of its top 20 records this week are urban/dance tracks. Only the presence of Boyzone, The Beautiful South, Manic Street Preachers and Mansun in its top 20 distinguish it from Kiss FM. The Mansun track, Wide Open Space, is in fact its top track, with 26 plays last week. It received only minimal support elsewhere, with Radio One listeners amounting to 94% of its total audience.

Amidst all the big name releases, the highest new entry on the Top 100 airplay chart this week is Say What You Want by Texas, which debuts at number 35. Attracting widespread support, including, importantly, Chris Evans, it received 162 spins last week. It's already the group's biggest airplay hit since Tired Of Being Alone in 1992, and looks like eclipsing even that in the next week or two, possibly setting the group up for its biggest retail hit since 1989's introductory smash I Don't Need A Lover.

The longest running hit on the Top 40 airplay chart is George Michael's Spinning The Wheel, which falls 28-36 on its 20th consecutive appearance. George's new single Older fails to make its expected impression this week, retreating from its top 100 perch of a week ago, though its setback is surely only temporary. It is, however, very late in picking up airplay for George, with its release more than a fortnight away.
