CHART COMMENTARY

by ALAN JONES

SINGLE FACTFILE

The Pet Shop Boys have their highest-charting single since 1996 this week, as You Only Tell Me You Love Me When You're Drunk debuts at number eight. That equals the peak of 1996's Se A Vide E (That's The Way Life Is) and easily surpasses the peak positions of the two previous singles from Nightlife, their current album. The first single, I Don't Know What You Want But I Can't Give It Any More reached number 15 while New York City Boy peaked a notch higher. It's a sign of how low sales are at the moment, however, that both sold far more copies on their first week in the shops than the current single. I Don't Know... started with a sale of 26,300, New York City Boy with 22,700 and Drunk with 16,700. Nightlife peaked at number seven when it was released last October but has sold disappointingly, finishing 288th in the 1999 rankings, with fewer than 38,000 sales. It is currently uncharted.

The UK record industry has become increasingly sophisticated in recent years, learning more and more marketing tricks to maximise the chart potential of singles. It's rather baffling, therefore, to find that one of the devices it previously used to great effect has been more or less abandoned this year.

In the Eighties, record companies realised that the period after Christmas and at the start of the new year was ripe for exploitation: with sales at a low level it offered a great opportunity to introduce new talent and to give fanbase acts high visibility through higher than usual chart positions. It worked wonders for new act Men At Work's Down Under and fanbase act Iron Maiden's Bring Your Daughter... To The Slaughter, both of which stormed to number one as a result. The play has been used decreasingly in recent years, however, and is almost absent from the mix this year, with only six new entries to the Top 75, compared to 10 a year ago, and more than 20 in some previous years.

The fact that this year's Christmas/New Year holiday was a sprawling and unique celebration of the millennium may have had some effect but the trend has been moving in this direction for some years. The result of the dearth of new product was very poor sales, with just 585,000 singles sold last week, of which the number one accounted for 34,700. Neither the market nor the number one seller has been at a lower ebb in the past 10 years.

Singles sales are only a quarter of what they were three weeks ago, and are down 30% on the lowpoint of 834,000 that they reached at the start of 1999. Any suggestion that sales are down because consumers have spent their disposable income on recent festivities is contradicted by the albums market which is remarkably buoyant, with more than 2.38m units sold last week, a 12% increase on the same week last year.

A couple of records which have benefited from the current singles chart lethargy are Westlife's I Have A Dream/Seasons In The Sun, which spends its fourth week at number one to become the longest-running chart topper since Cher's Believe in December 1998, and DJ Luck & MC Neat's A Little Bit Of Luck, which has climbed 18-17-14-11 during the past three weeks despite shrinking sales.

by ALAN JONES

After finishing as the third biggest-selling album of 1999, Travis' The Man Who Remains in great demand at the start of 2000, selling more than 47,600 copies last week to return to number one. It previously spent a fortnight at the summit, reaching pole position on August 28 and staying there the following week. Its total sales to date exceed 1,450,000.

Frequent TV appearances during Christmas and the New Year and increasing exposure for her upcoming single Born To Make You Happy, which explodes 14-4 on this week's (unpublished) airplay chart have led a tonic for Britney Spears' debut ...Baby One More Time, which has improved 25-10-7 during the past fortnight, and is now just three notches below its chart peak. The album, which also includes the eponymous, chart-topping and million-selling debut single, the number three hit Sometimes and the number five hit (You Drive Me) Crazy, has been an ever-present in the chart since its release last March, and has sold more than 666,000 copies so far. Every year the sales season kicks in after Christmas and creates havoc in the albums chart. This year is no exception, with, as usual, Warner Music's heavily discounted bring its cumulative tally to more than 2,425,000. It is already the biggest-selling album of all time by a country act and is drawing ever closer to Alanis Morissette's Jagged Little Pill, the all-time biggest-selling album by a female solo artist. With Don't Be Stupid, the sixth single from Come On Over, due later this month, it is a target that it looks set to reach prior to the release of Twain's new album in the spring.

mid-priced repertoire providing the centerpiece to most retailers' displays. This explains the massive growth in sales of The Corrs' Forgiven, Not Forgotten (up 91-13 in the last fortnight), Tracy Chapman's self-titled debut (140-19), Catatonia's International Velvet (128-25). The Corrs' Talk On Corners (80-28), the Red Hot Chili Peppers' Californication (77-36) and many others. It is interesting to note that supermarket chains such as Tesco have concentrated their attention on the likes of Abba's Gold, Shania Twain's Come On Over and Westlife, all of which could be purchased for £9.99, and all of which doubtlessly benefited from the promotion.

Meanwhile, rapidly growing bargain basement supermarket Aldi's full-page newspaper ads offering slashed prices included just one album, bizarrely Deep Purple's Made In Japan, which is on sale for £4.99. Despite the retailer's brave support, it has not returned to the chart this week.

COMPILATIONS

Now That's What I Call Music! 44 extends its reign on top of the compilations chart to seven weeks, and remains impressively far ahead of its nearest competitors, its sales last week proving more than the combined tally of runner-up Hits 2000 and third-placed Music Of The Millennium.

Now! 44 had a remarkable run before Christmas, selling more than 250,000 copies for five weeks in a row, becoming the first album - compilation or otherwise - to maintain sales at such a lofty level for so long. Its cumulative sales are in excess of 1,480,000, a remarkable 442,000 or 42% ahead of the previously record pace for a compilation album, set (natch) by last Christmas' Now That's What I Call Music!

You might think it would be wilting a bit at this stage, and that Now 41 would be closing the percentage gap, but you would be wrong. Now! 44 sold 39,000 copies last week - 56% more than the 25,000 units racked up by Now! 41 in the same week last year. The continued buoyancy of Now! 44 helped compilations to a bumper week with more than 582,000 sales last week, up 16% on the same week in 1999.

There were 11 Christmas albums in the Top 50 a fortnight ago, and now there are none. Their rapid departure - with sales down 95% each week - is no surprise but it does deny Virgin/EMI's The Best Christmas Album In The World...Ever! the opportunity of registering its millionth sale for another year. The album has sold 970,000 copies so far, and was the top album of seasonal music for the third year in a row.
