2. Mario
Mario's self-titled 2002 debut album spawned hit singles in Just A Friend (number 18) and C'mon (number 28) but failed to chart itself, and sold a little less than 16,000 copies. Follow-up Turning Point - ep 14-13 this week - is already much more successful with sales of 93,915, and spins off its first hit single this week in the form of Let Me Love You. A number one hit in the States for the 18-year-old from Baltimore for nine weeks earlier this year, it makes its UK debut at number two, with first-week sales of 54,913.

4. 50 Cent
50 Cent makes chart history in the US this week, becoming the first artist to have four singles in the Top 10 of the Hot 100 simultaneously since The Beatles filled the entire Top Five in 1964. On that chart, in partnership with The Game, 50 Cent moves 11-6 with Hate It Or Love It and 7-3 with How We Do, while his solo single Disco Inferno dips 3-5. Completing the quartet, Cady Shop is number one for the fifth week in a row. It also debuts at four here this week, becoming his sixth straight Top 10 hit in two years. Meanwhile, The Game's How We Do moves 24-31 this week, six weeks after release.

3. Basement Jaxx
One of the most successful dance acts of the past decade, Basement Jaxx landed their 14th consecutive Top 10 single and their fourth biggest hit to date when debuting at number eight with Oh My Gosh last week. The band's first new track since 2003, it also appears on their compilation The Singles, which includes Romeo, Rendez-Vu, Where's Your Head At?, Good Luck and other hits that have helped them sell 869,000 singles and 777,000 albums so far. The Singles becomes the band's highest charting album to date, debuting at three while adding a further 53,676 sales to the latter tally.

4. Queens Of The Stone Age
A week after single Little Sister reached number 18, Queens Of The Stone Age debut at number four with fourth album Lullabies To Paralyze on first-week sales of 53,270. That equals the group's previous best chart position, set by their last album Songs For The Deaf in 2002, but far eclipses its first-week sales of 31,778. The rockers' self-titled 1998 debut failed to chart but sold 50,902 copies and R, a 2000 release which scraped its way to number 54 on the chart, sold 133,337 copies. Songs For The Deaf has so far sold 320,855 copies.

11. Jem
 With so few British artists reaching the US charts at all these days, it is rare to find one who made their US chart debut before their UK chart debut - but Welsh singer-songwriter Jem is one. Her debut album Finally Woken made just one appearance on Billboard's Top 200 album chart last May, at number 197, but has so far sold 190,769 copies in the US, and continues to generate airplay. Released here last month, it spun off the single They - which reached number six last week - and arrives in the Top 20 itself this week, having moved 183-75-75-44-28-11 since its release.

15. Beck
 The single E-Pro barely earned Beck his 10th Top 40 single last week, when it debuted at 38 with just 1,987 takers, but parent album Guero - Beck's first for three years - makes up for that shortfall by debuting at 15, instantly becoming his highest-charting album. First-week sales of 18,282 also mark a new high for Beck, 1996's Odelay was his highest-debuting (number 18) and highest-charting (number 17 on its 37th week in the chart) album thus far, and also provided his previous best first-week tally of 8,276.
